A REPUBLICAN VIEW OF JEFFERSON DAVIS .- The Boston Advertiser, an able Republican journal, says that if it had no other evidence, the inauguration address of the new President of the "Confederate States," is proof of the unusual wisdom with which the Seces-An act to amend section 2nd, chapter 119 of the Revised sionists acted when they elected Jefferson Davis to that Code entitled "Widows." office. It credits him with as marked a combination of the qualities most needed for his work as any revolutionary leader ever exhibited, and adds:

As the leader of the Cotton States in their movement against the General Government, whether the controversy is to be carried on by civil measures only, or by sterner methods, to which he professes himself prepared, though unwilling to resort, this Government could have no more dangerous enemy than Mr. Davis, and this fact, we believe, needs to be more widely recognized than it is among our people. Because Mr. Davis has led the extreme South, many have come to regard him as possessing the personal qualities and An act to allow the county trustee to sell certain property weaknesses of the "fire-eaters." But Mr. Davis is, on the contrary, cool-headed, far-sighted and not hasty .--What he says or does is not the result of crazy impulse, but of cool determination, and is supported not by the temporary strength of frenzy, but by real intellectual and moral power. In short he is an antagonist who challenges respect as well as the utmost vigor and caution in opposition, and one whom any statesman might rejoice to encounter in a high national contest, were he of any country save our own, and were the matter in debate anything except the Union.
